PRODUCTS OF OUR TIME EXHIBITION OPENS

Saint Paul, MN— Products of Our Time, curated by Daniel Jasper, Assistant Professor of Graphic Design at the University of Minnesota's College of Design, presents work by an international group of designers and artists who comment on the current environmental, economic, cultural and political landscape using products. Products of Our Time will be on view at the Goldstein museum of Design from July 21-September 30, 2007.

Products tell us about ourselves. With the rise of the consumer economy, designed products function as cultural indicators of who we are as a society and where we are going. However, products tell us about past civilizations, too. Archeologists study human-made artifacts and products to reveal complex histories. For example, over 5500 years ago, the Sumerians produced one of the first known writing systems to record exchanges of goods and products.

Some of the designers in Products of Our Time pose theoretical questions, such as Dominic Wilcox's Bird Cage for Exactly One Bird. Others, including Mike Libby and Insect Lab, create customized variations on a theme. Still others, such as Tobias Wong's chrome-plated Box Cutter, have been engineered for mass production.

Products of our Time will include work by Kate Bingaman Burt, CSA Design, DNA II, Dunne & Raby, Mark Franchino, Keith Farley, FredriksonStallard, Marti Guixe, Insect Lab, Jimmyjane, Ju$t Another Rich Kid and Tobias Wong, Koffski, Studio Ooms, Noam Troan, Tobias Wong and Philip Wood,.
